RACING | HISTORY | PASSION

It is evident that historic motor sports is evolving inexorably, and the whole scene keeps having a strong impetus. An increasingly broader community of classic cars and historic motor sports enthusiasts, as well as numerous events and many anniversary celebrations on race tracks have demonstrated over the past few years which direction this is going to take. The team at our magazine devotes itself with passion to historic motor sports, the history of motor sports and its players because, if you are looking for reasons for this steady increase, it all comes back to the same common denominator. It's the shapes, the colours, the sounds from the past which are inspired by a time in which racing drivers were the heroes of the road - a living history, which no museum in the world can provide. A possible explanation as to the shapes was given to us by Karl-Heinz Nottrodt, a former car designer at Ford, who occasionally lent his support to their motor sports department. "The Ferrari 250 GT SWB is one of my absolute favourites - and do you know why these cars are so beautiful? We, the designers, were already aware of it in those days. The hand-made bodyworks have never been one hundred percent symmetrical, a left and a right wing always differs by a few millimetres or fractions thereof. That produces stresses. These are not apparent to the naked eye, but we perceive them subliminally, and the result is this incredible beauty."

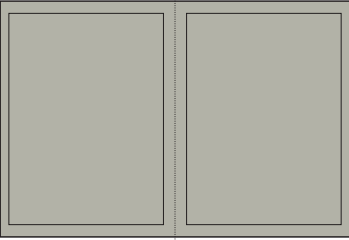

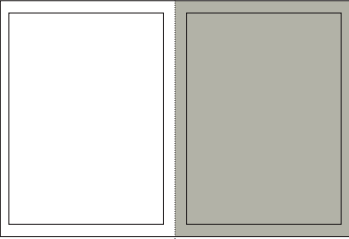

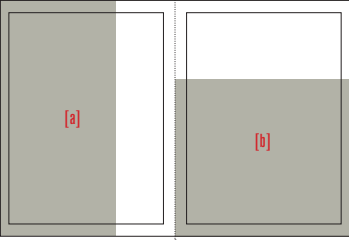

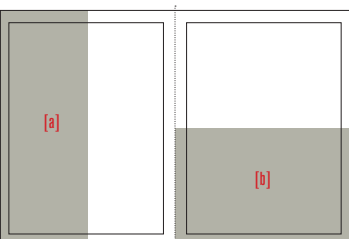

Such beauty is difficult to find in today's daily routine. When we discover it, it may well awaken longings and kindle great enthusiasm in many places. This is why historic racing cars must also be noisy, so that it goes right through you. And they have to smell. That's how they evoke emotions, and we can perceive the past with every single sense. All this forms part of historic motor sports, which is why we are committed to it, wholeheartedly - in each edition of AUTOMOBILSPORT.
